What Is Faraday cage. Faraday cages can be found in a variety of places such as at power plants. They are used to protect electronic equipment from harmful EM radiation by shielding the equipment from outside EM interference. Faraday cages are not windows Faraday cages can be effective to shield electronic equipment from outside EM interference. However, they are not like windows. Windows are just holes or holes with screens. If you place an electric current on the ground near a window of your home, then you will see a colorful charge in the window. This is because the electric current flows to the earth by the window, due to which the earth carries the current. The same thing happens if there is a hole in your wall that you are not aware of. You put an electric current on the ground near the hole and you will see a colorful charge in the wall near the hole. This is called earth looping. In this case, the hole and the earth is a Faraday cage that loops around the earth. The earth loops the current around and this is why you do not see a charge in the wall. In the case of Faraday cages, this is not happening. Faraday cages are more than just holes that the earth can enter into. In the case of Faraday cages, they are conductive cages that can carry an electric current.

Epidemiology of major urological and gynecological surgery at a University hospital. To determine the epidemiology of major urological and gynecological surgery at a university hospital, and to assess whether the results are comparable to other national and international series. Retrospective review of the hospital records for urological and gynecological operations performed at the Karolinska University Hospital (KUH), during the year 1994. The annual number of urological and gynecological operations, combined and separately, during 1994 at KUH was 18,131, of which 3,403 (19.3%) were major operations. The total number of urological operations declined by 25% and the number of major operations by 46%. The annual number of gynecological operations remained relatively stable. Urological and gynecological operations were performed in 11.9% and 12.6% of all inpatients, respectively. Urological operations were performed in 3.5% of all admissions and 6.2% of inpatients, and gynecological operations in 7.6% of admissions and 9.1% of in
