In a typical cellular radio communications system, wireless terminals, also referred to as mobile stations and/or user equipments (UEs), communicate via a Radio Access Network (RAN) with one or more core networks, which provide access points to other remote networks. A RAN covers a geographical area that is divided into cell areas, which in turn are divided into service areas or sectors. A RAN may thus comprise a number of base stations, distributed geographically at spaced-apart locations throughout the service area or sector, which collectively provide for the geographic coverage of the service area or sector. In some instances, one or more core networks may extend their coverage in a broadened geographical area than that of the service area or sector (e.g., metropolitan areas). As the demand for mobile broadband access continues to increase, the possibilities of interference and capacity degradation due to interference will require solutions. The interference and capacity degradation is due to co-channel interference (CCI), such that communications are performed simultaneously on a same frequency for a same user equipment. 08 A M H o w m a n y m i n u t e s a r e t h e r e b e t w e e n 6 : 2 8 P M a n d 1 1 : 5 4 P M ? 3 2 6 H o w m a n y m i n u t e s a r e t h e r e 3e33713323
