We are "Asian & Native" customers.Q: How to obtain Nearest Neighbors from a RDD[(x, y)] in scala I have one input csv file which its structure is as follows. "x","y" "a","b" "b","c" So it is a RDD of type RDD[(String, String)]. I wanted to obtain the data for which the x value is a or b, but I am not sure how can I obtain it from RDD. I have started with the following code

val input=sc.textFile("file.csv") val data=input.map(x=>(x.split(",")(0),x.split(",")(1)))

 Now I am at a loss about how to proceed. I could do map on this data to get a RDD of type RDD[(Int,Int)]. But then how can I use "x" as the key and "y" as the value to obtain the nearest neighbors in this RDD? A: If you have a RDD[(String, String)] you can call collectAsMap on it and it should give you the list of all items in the RDD as a Map. From that list you can access the value of the x-coordinate to see if it's a or b. For example, let's say you called RDD data and the original RDD[(String, String)] is called rdd. val listOfItems = rdd.collectAsMap() val result = List(String, String) listOfItems.keys.foreach
